Annotation: This page discusses mother-in-law-in-law relationships, duties, and responsibilities in families from Eastern countries and other countries, as well as in the circle of mother-in-laws. Relationships, way of life.

Keywords: mother-in-law, bride, family, household, relationship, independent, tradition, society, state.

The existing social, economic, and ideological relations in society, which alter in their influence, define family relations as a largely independent phenomenon. As a result, each society develops a proper family type, with family relationships evolving.

Many people of different nationalities like our Uzbek family life, particularly the silai—mercy of relatives toward one another, as well as our customs, such as wedding rituals. Because of the Islamic morality that has persisted between us, this is the case. Many losers are those who live in such tranquility, richness, and damage family bonds. This is due to a lack of gratitude for a quiet and peaceful life. Unfortunately, quarrels between couples, children, relatives, mothers-in-law, and brides are becoming more common. The relationship between the mother-in-law and the bride has deteriorated recently, and these quarrels have even caused a rift between the son and the bride, resulting in divorce. In the worst-case scenario, the children will be orphaned as a result of the argument. Instead of dreaming of a smart, healthy, believing wife for her son, they seek vengeance on the goods that brought the bride to the Wells in the first place, on the goods that will be with the Wells. They expand and worsen their sons, causing them to fall into the cold between their son and their daughter-in-law, instead of showing love to their daughter-in-law and explaining their flaws through persecution and encouragement. The work of my mother-in-law is a challenging one that necessitates patience. Much more love, tolerance, and forgiveness from the mother-in-law is required for the son-in-law, who gave birth to him and gave birth to him, to live happily with his son, and for the daughter-in-law, who grew up in an alien environment, to become a member of his family, his own child.

On the topic of "mother-in-law-bride," he had to interview hundreds of people and research their lived experiences. The findings are depressing: 60-70 percent of family disputes were caused by the mother-in-"salinity." Although I, like opportunity, do not believe in these things, the numbers are unyielding. So, what are your options? It is vital to change to Islamic Relations and follow the Shari'ah rules. This evangelism to be, to show mercy to others, not to deliver hurt to someone and not to oppress Allah in the commandments of Allah, Muhammad (s. a.v.) it is said that it is necessary to begin to carry out the instructions.

Now put yourself in your shoes. Those same bulging eyes, a woman shaking her marrow - she is a minuscule minion daughter who does not believe in Capricorns, aside from an eighteen-year-old father and mother, avaylab, adoptive, self-feeding, dressed without wearing herself, earth-she is a minuscule minion daughter who does not believe in Capricorns. How many have passed through his honor, preserving his virginity, providing a proper upbringing, reconciling his decency, and instructing in domestic matters? He didn't even say anything, didn't look at it, and just said "someone else's fur," "guest at home." He has received a bit of this heart that supports you, believing in your promises that "well-being is a thousand years old, I regard you as my own daughter."

Advice to the mother-in-law:

1. Treat your daughter-in-law as if she were your kid, "my daughter-in-law," and show her kindness, educate her how to do domestic chores without harming her, and cover her mistakes.

2. Take the bride's side if the couple gets furious or hit. Because your son is your own, your sentence does not sink, or rather, a mouth-hard statement that the bride said at the time that the dispute would be stronger.

3. If a young bride misses her parents, quickly allow her to see them, as it will be much more difficult for her to adjust to a new family and break away from loved ones as a new wife. After that, it doesn't go much further than that.

4. Do not extol the husnini of other brides in front of your bride, her attire and attractions, her dexterity and sexuality, the Wells spending aside-do not undervalue it, for you have embarrassed her, you have caused her pain. It is feasible to teach simply manners, other people's manners.

5. Never let my daughter-in-law have a bad time, and don't think I'll remarry my son because of it. "A good word comes out of a snake's nest, a sword with a bad word comes out of the sheath." There are golden rules that brides must follow, and as the old saying goes, the applause comes from both hands. On your shoulders is a white bridal gown; today you are a bride. Another apartment greets you with an embrace and roses strewn across your head. After twenty years, you were entrusted with the fate of the grown-up sons. "The bride has come to our yard, the blessing has come, the joy has come, the step is blessed!" he prayed. Now begins a new life for you. You must leave your apartment, where you have lived for eighteen years, find a language with strangers and become an el. You need to break away from loved ones, loving parents and become the closest person to your husband, mother-in-law-in-law. Otherwise, there will be no rest, peace of mind in both families. What do you need to do for this?

Ten tips for brides:

1. Because your mother-in-law is a mother, her age, the breadth of her experience, and your knowledge help to maintain her self-esteem, even as she becomes more involved.

2. Don't make it a habit of talking to your parents or exposing family secrets to the public.

3. Consult with your mother-in-law, spend your money on the agreement with your mother-in-law, and be frugal.

4. Get in the habit of apologizing right away if you've done something wrong or failed to complete any of your mother-in-law's duties. "The Bent Head does not cut the sword," says a transplant among our people.

5. Make an effort to get along with your mother-in-law, and help your ovsins in the flat find their soul partner.

Psychologists believe that the complex relationship between mother-in-law and the bride is three in all countries of the world. In some countries it is said that the solution to this problem is achieved. In the East, the problem of mother-in-law-bride is observed.

The love that Italian men have for their mothers has been well documented. Despite the fact that her son lives separately, the mother continues to meddle in his life after the wedding. True, unlike in certain Eastern countries, the Italiyada mother-in-law does not expect brides to perform their duties. The bot-bot is reminded, however, that the son has the right to be interested in how his wife will dress, how she will make up, and what she will buy. It isn't a simple sentence. If the bride follows her mother-in-law's suggestion, there will be excellent light on the light. Otherwise, it risks being subjected to the wrath of the mother-in-law. If the bride lives with her mother-in-law, happiness such as this is not guaranteed. It is both difficult and impossible to debate with an Italian mother-in-law. Only the mother-in-law knows how to give her daughter-in-law and son a happy life.

The bride lives in a house with her mother-in-law in the Solomon Islands. A rare quarrel will arise between them. The reason is straightforward. The bride and mother-in-law are not required to labor on the farm at the same time, according to local custom. That is, either the bride or the mother-in-law should take care of the housework. This type of labor distribution helps to keep wars at bay.

The situation in Mexico is worth praising. In this country, a mother-in-law does not have a son-in-law. They are believed to be friends on a mutual level. It is usual for the bride to reveal her most intimate secrets to her mother-in-law. As a result, the mother-in-law tries to assist her son and daughter-in-law in any way she can. This aids in the resolution of a variety of home issues as well as the prevention of confrontations.

Young people have become accustomed to living apart from their parents. The interaction between adults and children in the family is based on equality. As a result, in this country, brides are not used to receiving any advice or instruction from their mother-in-law. The brides themselves do not seek assistance from their mother-in-law. Young people are self-sufficient in their problem-solving abilities. If a problem emerges, the bride-to-be will seek assistance from the psychologist rather than her parents. In rare circumstances, the bride meets with her husband's close relatives, even at family functions.

A married daughter-in-law in India must comprehend that every murder of her mother-in-law is a law for her. There have also been instances of the mother-in-law's being abused. This, in turn, leads to criminal activity. Indian officials were forced to open a separate prison for their mother-in-law as a result of the circumstance. In the "Tixar" prison in Delhi, a specific area for mothers-in-law was established. What will be the punishment for the mother-in-law's? First and foremost, for the sake of taste. True, the bride's mother-in-law expects a thick from her daughter-in-law. The same thing, namely, thick issuance, is outlawed by Indian law. Despite this, many women still want to follow ancient customs.

To summarize, brides who are aggressive, affectionate, tidy, enthusiastic, sweet-hearted, patient in the presence of marriage, and austere can become a beloved bride to their spouses and a beloved bride to their mother-in-law.
